Our house rules!

My parents want the best for me, my brother and my sister. They teach us to be responsible, tidy and well-organised. That's why they make us do things round the house that we aren't always interested in doing.

One job is looking after our bedrooms. We have to tidy them up, clean, make our beds and put our things away. Each of us also looks after a different part of our home. My sister cleans the living room and I clean a smaller room: the kitchen. My mum usually helps me, because the kitchen is a big job. My brother does things outside in the garden and he takes out the rubbish.

Another rule in our house involves the Internet and the phone. Teenagers like to chat online or on the phone – I know because I am one! It's part of our daily routine. But sometimes we can't turn the computer off or put the phone down. My parents tell us we can chat online or on the phone for an hour and a half each day, and that's all. That's good because I get my homework done. Of course, that hour and a half becomes nothing when we don't help out. Ask my brother – he knows!

These are some of our house rules. What happens in your house? Leave a comment on my blog – I'd love to hear from you!
