Reading

You are going to read an article about London's underground railway. For questions 1-6, choose the answer (A, B, C or D) which you think fits best according to the text.

In 2013, the London Underground celebrated its 150th anniversary. When 'the Tube', as it later became known, first opened in January 1863, it was the world's first underground passenger railway. Trains had run through tunnels before, but it was the first time a whole railway line had been built below the streets. Trains of any kind were still quite new, so to build a railway network underground was a very bold and daring idea; one which was carried out by brave men who were prepared to take a risk. In those early days the trains were powered by steam, but in 1890 the London Underground was also the first railway system in the world to introduce electric underground trains.

Underground rail travel was very different in the 1800s. The platforms were dirty and unhealthy due to the smoke from the steam trains. Tickets were sold at three different fares, so you could travel in first, second or third class depending on how rich you were. Although some people preferred to stay above ground, the London Underground was extremely popular. With 26,000 people using it every day in its first six months, it helped to solve the problem of streets that were crowded with people and horse-drawn vehicles.

The Tube continued to be popular into the 20th century and, during the First World War while so many men were away, it began to employ women for the first time. In the Second World War, Underground platforms were used by Londoners to escape from the bombs which were being dropped on the city at night. The trains continued to run, and in the evenings the platforms were a crowded mixture of people who were trying to travel across London and families who were trying to find somewhere safe. Up to 177,000 people spent their nights on underground platforms during the war.

The famous London Underground map, showing all the routes and stations, was designed in 1933 and has been used ever since. Its clear simple design has always been popular and in 2006 it came second in a competition to find the British public's favourite British design of the 20th century. At 249 miles long, the London Underground is the fourth longest metro system in the world, and every weekday over 3.5 million people use it to get around the city. Surprisingly though, a lot of it is actually above ground level and less than half is in tunnels.

So what do the locals think of their historic transport system? Jade Nicholson, 16, uses the Tube to get to school every day. 'Generally it's fine,' she says, 'and it does get me from A to B quickly. Some of my friends don't like travelling underground because it makes them a bit anxious, but I don't have a problem with that. I'll happily take the Underground as long as I don't have to travel during the rush hour, when it's really crowded. That's horrible. But at other times, I'll always choose the Tube. The service is much better and it's more fun to use than the buses. I like travelling on a system that's famous across the world!'

A long way home!

If you're <sup>1</sup> _____ in funny films, you should watch one called Trains, Planes and Automobiles. The film is about two very <sup>2</sup> _____ men who find themselves in the same <sup>3</sup> _____ – the plane they want to <sup>4</sup> _____ can't leave the airport because of bad weather. The rest of the story is about how they travel by train, bus and car to try and get to where they want to go.

What makes the film so funny is that the two main characters are so different. They end up driving each other up the <sup>5</sup> _____. Steve Martin, who plays a(n) <sup>6</sup> _____, successful businessman, is always <sup>7</sup> _____ about the rather crazy and <sup>8</sup> _____ things that John Candy, the unsuccessful travelling salesman, does.

The film is quite old – it was in cinemas in 1987 – but if you want to see it, go to almost any film site and <sup>9</sup> _____ it. Once you've done that, you can watch it on your <sup>10</sup> _____ or computer whenever you feel like it. I'm sure you'll enjoy it!

4 Circle the correct words.

Can I use your phone?

'Watson, come here. I need you!' Do you know the name of the person <sup>1</sup> who / why said that? If you answered, 'Alexander Graham Bell', then you <sup>2</sup> will / would be correct! The day Bell <sup>3</sup> ordered / denied Watson to come into his workshop, was the day <sup>4</sup> when / where Bell finally knew that his new invention, the telephone, was actually going to be a success.

Things would have been very different if Bell <sup>5</sup> hadn't / hasn't invented the phone back in 1876. Nowadays, because of Bell and the invention <sup>6</sup> for / on which he is most famous, communicating with friends and family is no problem at all. If you <sup>7</sup> wanted / want to talk to someone, you just ring them up. It's that easy! It doesn't matter <sup>8</sup> whose / where you are in the world: as long as you have a mobile phone, you <sup>9</sup> could / can communicate with people anywhere.

However, believe it or not, Bell didn't really like the telephone. He <sup>10</sup> promised / complained that it stopped him from getting anything done and he refused to have one in his laboratory!
