Q1: Read the text and answer the following questions:

How often do you check your phone every day? 20, 50, 80 times? Surveys have shown that the average person checks their phone about 70 times a day. And you might not believe it but some people spend up to nine hours a day using social media or online video or music. We all want to post comments, follow celebrities and know what's going on with our friends. Social media can make our lives full and exciting. However, research also shows a worrying trend. Some people can't stop checking their social media sites. They do it all the time – sometimes hundreds of times a day. Lots of us know that we look at our phones too often and try to control it. But when you really can't stop checking, it's a problem. It distracts us from other things and it can make us stressed. Scientists have given this problem a name. It's called FOMO. This stands for Fear Of Missing Out! Three children in every classroom today may have this problem. People who have FOMO feel they need to start and finish their day with social media updates. They have a real fear that they will miss something new, interesting or important. Perhaps a friend is doing something fun, a celebrity has talked about his new film or there's a funny video about a new food craze trending?

Our Life Is Too Dependent on the Internet

Nowadays, the Internet plays a major role in our daily lives. Some people say that we rely on it too much, while others believe it is necessary for modern life. In my opinion, our dependence on the Internet has both advantages and disadvantages.

First of all, the Internet makes life easier. We use it for communication, work, shopping, and education. In many ways, it saves time and effort. For example, students can access information quickly, and employees can work from home.

Secondly, social media and online entertainment have become an important part of our lives. People stay connected with friends and family, and they enjoy music, videos, and games. What's more, businesses depend on the Internet to reach customers and grow.

However, I believe that too much dependence on the Internet can be harmful. Many people spend hours online, which affects their health and social skills. In addition, relying on the Internet for everything can make us less independent and less active in real life.

To sum up, the Internet is useful and important, but we should not depend on it for everything. After all, real-life experiences and face-to-face communication are just as valuable.
