Money

When we think of money, we usually think of coins and paper money. But before coins were made, many other things were used for money.

Some countries used small things, like dates or stones or shells. Some used big things, like cows or elephants or camels. Some used rice or tea or corn. Some used the feathers of birds.

Most of this money was too heavy to carry easily, so someone invented coins made of silver, gold and other metals. This was very clever, because coins don't fall through the fingers like rice, and they can't run away from you like cows.

Next time you go to the market to buy a melon, stop and think. Would you prefer to pay for it a bag of stones or a bag of fifty feathers?

- 1- According to the text, using cows as money was a bad idea because _____.
 - A. cows are too heavy to carry everywhere.
 - B. cows were not available at that time.
 - C. cows may be lost easily.
 - D. cows were priceless.

 - A. heavy and light things in nature.
 - B. animals, birds and food.
 - C. things used as money in the past.
 - D. buying melon from the market.

• Read the following text carefully, and then answer the questions:(6-9)

The world's population is growing, and one day, there may not be enough food for everyone. If scientists are able to change the genes of animals and plants, there will be enough food for many more people. For example, potatoes can't grow in very cold places. However, some living things like certain fish do live in extremely cold places without being harmed. If scientists can find the genes that help these fish to survive, they might be able to transfer the genes to potatoes. Then potatoes could grow in very cold places. This would mean there is food for more people around the world.

However some people think that changing genes in living things is not a good idea. They argue that there may be risks that we don't know about which might affect our health and environment.

6- Scientists may help produce more food by _____.

- A. changing animals and plants environment.
- B. looking after certain types of fish.
- C. growing more potatoes.
- D. changing genes of animals and plants.

- B. plants and animals.
- C. plants, animals and people.
- D. a group of persons.

8- The underlined word (transfer) line (5) means _____.

- A. pass
- B. cancel
- C. remove
- D. change

9- Changing genes might have some risks because _____.

- A. there will be less food than before.
- B. the fish and potatoes will be of bad quality.
- C. health and environment will be affected.
- D. some people argue against changing genes in living things.
