Read the passage and answer the questions that follow.

“The Chief and the Thief”

My mother took my sister and me to see a play at the arts center. The play was about an Indian chief who liked to make pies. It was an exciting play to watch because a thief took a pie from the chief’s house. This made the chief grieve. The chief was filled with grief over the pie being taken and he told his friends he was very sad. Then the chief and thief decided to have a cooking contest to see who could make the best pie. The chief made a pie. But the chief made the best pie and won the prize.

The thief did not win, but he went home with his pie and told his wife a lie that he won the pie-cooking contest. The thief’s wife did not see a prize. There was no prize money or ribbon for a prize. This was a clue that his story was just not true. The wife asked her husband (the thief) for the money that was due as he had borrowed money from her to buy the ingredients needed for the pie. “Yes!” she smiled, “Now you have money and You need to pay me back the money that is due!”
