The American type of football was developed in the 19th century from soccer and rugby. People of all ages play it. Football in America is one of the most popular sports. In this game, the ball is kicked, thrown, or run by the players and the goal is to move a ball across a goal by kicking. The game is divided into four quarters, each is fifteen minutes long. The first two quarters are known as the first half. There is a rest period between the two halves which usually lasts about fifteen minutes. Each team has eleven players. Each team has offensive players (play when the team has possession of the ball) and defensive players (play when the other team has possession of the ball).

Players can leave the game and other players called substitutes take their places. Players also must use protective equipment to help keep the body safe during the game. Helmets are worn to protect the head and face area. Protective equipment must be worn because of the body contact players have during the game. Officials are very important to the game of football. They are called referees. They carry whistles and there are also linesmen, who help them control the game and make sure that the rules of the game are followed during the game. The football is made of leather and is brown in color. It is oval and has white rings near each end of the football. The most exciting play in this game is when the player hit the ball very far and go around the bases without stopping.
