Reading

A Read the following passage, then answer the questions:

Lifestyle and Family

Italians are often described as warm and friendly people. Strong traditional ties bind families together, although Italian family dynamics vary from region to region. Normally, northern Italians are a little more reserved than southern Italians. Most parents want to know where their child is going when he/she leaves the house. Italians are not very punctual. Italians are happy and easygoing, always ready to have fun or to laugh at a good joke. They place great importance on friendship and loyalty and are usually very willing to help others, even if this means going out of their way. Selfishness and strong individualism are frowned upon. It is common to offer to share whatever you are eating. It is considered rude if you eat something in front of others without offering. Italians are passionate in the way they communicate: they talk aloud and use lots of gesturing and emphatic facial expressions.

Teen Life and Sports

Because schools in Italy do not organise many extracurricular activities, students usually organise their own free time. Young people can generally stay out until late on Saturday night and, if the family is more liberal, perhaps one or two other nights during the week. Young people tend to live at home until they get married. Teens do not usually have part-time jobs.

A 1 Mention a negative point about the Italians.

They are not very punctual.

2 Write about the Italian passion in no more than three sentences.

The passion of Italians comes out in they way they talk. They often talk a lot and they are very expressive with their hands and body.

3 Write any similarities or differences between the Italian teens and the teens in your country.

Similarities: They stay up late
Differences: They live with their parents until they get married
They don't have jobs.

B The following conversation is not in the right order. Number the sentences properly to show the right order:

You can count on me!

Sue: You can always count on me. 6

Stacy: Sue, can you drive Jane and me to the doctor on Monday? 1

Stacy: Thanks, you are a good friend. 5

Stacy: We need a ride very badly, are you sure you will be able to help out? 3

Sue: I think so. 4

Sue: Sure. I will mark it on my calendar so that I don't forget. 2

C Surf the internet and find out what the differences are between those who live in north Italy and those who live in south Italy:

In the north of Italy, people are wealthier, they are little skinned and not as traditional and religious as Italians in the south.

D Write a short paragraph about 'Lifestyle and Family' in your own country:

In my country, family values are being lost. Many people don't marry anymore and people have fewer and fewer children. People are very individual: they don't share rooms, televisions or phones and they often eat alone. Teenagers often prefer to live by themselves.
