Adunis

Ali Ahmad Said Asbar, also known as Adunis, is a Syrian poet who has made his career largely in Lebanon and France. He has written more than twenty books. From an early age he worked in the fields, but his father also made him memorize poetry. Soon he began to compose poems himself and in 1947 he won a scholarship to go to a school in Latakia, the city of his birth, after he read a poem to the president of Syria. Later he won another scholarship so he could study philosophy at the Syrian University in Damascus. In 1956 he moved to Beirut, Lebanon, where he founded a poetry magazine with a colleague. From 1970 to 1985 Adunis was professor of Arabic literature at the University of Lebanon. In 1980 he emigrated to France and became professor of Arabic at the Sorbonne in Paris for a year. Many poetry experts would like to see Adunis win the Nobel Prize in Literature.
